Step 1: Open a New Image First, create a new Photoshop document with enough space for your project. Then, import your image. Open the image into Photoshop. Step 2: Create a New Layer To create a new layer, make sure that your document is in the mode you need. If your document is in RGB mode, you should create a new layer in the Layers panel. If your document is in CMYK mode, you should create a new layer in the Layers panel. It's easiest to create a new layer in the Layers panel. Step 3: Change the Layer's Name After making sure that your document is in the correct mode, create a new layer, and rename it. It helps to use descriptive names for your layers. We'll call it "Artificial Turf." Create a new layer, name it "Artificial Turf." Step 4: Move a Layer's Contents After you've created a new layer, you can move the layer's contents. You can go to the Layers panel, select your layer, and then press the top-left button to move the contents. Select your layer, and press the top-left button. You can move the layer's contents by clicking and dragging the layer's outline. Step 5: Fill the Layer Select the layer, and press the top-left button to select the fill tool and fill the layer. Select the layer, and press the top-left button to select the fill tool. Step 6: Create a Gradient Next, create a gradient. Go to the Channels panel on the Layers panel. Select the Gradient tool and select Radial. Press the top-left button to select and deselect the Radial Gradient tool. Select the Radial tool. Step 7: Assign a Color Profile Before you create a gradient, it's recommended that you have a color profile setup. Go to the Layers panel, and select your new layer. Press the top-left button to select the Gradient tool. Press and hold the Alt key. Select the Gradient tool's Pick Up Spot option. Step 8: Create a Gradient Select the gradient from the Pick Up Spot gradient window. Create a new gradient in the Gradient

The problems that Photoshop have Photoshop is a very powerful tool, however it does have many problems. It's expensive! The subscription fees and annual costs are a bit much for most. Some of the monthly fees are very high. $90 for CS6 is too much for most photographers! Prices are inflated Adobe Photoshop has a long history of inflated prices. The company doesn't allow their products to have significant discounts. Inflation of Photoshop's prices is what makes it so expensive. Frequently, Photoshop is compared to Adobe Lightroom. Photographers always complain about this because Lightroom has much cheaper prices and a simpler interface. It's not all about speed. For some of us, Photoshop has many power features like the way blending modes work and the way layers work. Lightroom doesn't have these features, but it's not the case for Photoshop. The native file formats are limited to TIFF, PSD, and JPEG. Other formats like PNG and PDF don't have any way of exporting You need Photoshop to edit and create new image files You need Photoshop to correct mistakes. It's not fully compatible with all versions of Windows Adobe Photoshop is only available for Windows. It's not available for Mac Adobe Photoshop is an exclusive Windows software. It doesn't have any import functionality No way to import images from other software, like Apple's Aperture or Adobe Lightroom. If you regularly work on images using different pieces of software then this could be a problem. It's not easy to learn. Even though Photoshop is powerful and useful, its interface and tutorial videos can be confusing. It lacks a mobile app There is no easy-to-use mobile application for Photoshop. It's not that the mobile apps are that useful. It's not that there is a lack of developers. The mobile apps are just not very good quality. It's getting harder and harder to find any serious Photoshop tutorials on YouTube. They are full of sales pitches and direct you to the company's website. If you can't seem to find any decent tutorials, you are forced to buy a subscription. 388ed7b0c7

Cloning, expression and heterologous host-directed expression of the penaeidin-1-thioredoxin fusion gene from Pacific white shrimp. Penaeidins are functionally related thioredoxin-like proteins with thiol-dependent antioxidant properties that are expressed in the hepatopancreas of Pacific white shrimp Penaeus vannamei. In the present study, the penaeidin-1 gene was isolated from the gills of P. vannamei (pv-1). The open reading frame consists of an 82-bp 5'-untranslated region (UTR), a 536-bp 3'-UTR and an open reading frame encoding 177 amino acids. The deduced amino acid sequence of the pv-1 showed a high degree of homology to those of penaeidins from other shrimp species, and phylogenetic analysis also indicated that the pv-1 is closely related to penaeidins. To produce anti-pv-1 antiserum, a pv-1 DNA fragment was cloned into pET-21d(+) with an N-terminal His-tag. The recombinant plasmid pET-21d(+)-pv-1 was subsequently transformed into Escherichia coli BL21 (DE3). The expression of recombinant pv-1 was confirmed by SDS-PAGE and Western blot analysis using the specific anti-pv-1 antiserum. Recombinant pv-1 was purified with Ni-NTA affinity chromatography. Antioxidant activity was determined by measuring the scavenging capacity against 2,2-diphenyl-1-picrylhydrazyl (DPPH). Recombinant pv-1 had a higher DPPH scavenging activity and it also displayed potent thioredoxin-like activity in vitro. In vivo, the expression of pv-1 was induced by dietary supplementation with vitamin C or vitamin E, indicating that pv-1 is involved in resistance to oxidative stress. Heterologous host-directed expression of pv-1 in Spodoptera exigua larvae was achieved by microinjection with the codon-optimized pv-1 expression vector. The recombinant fusion protein pv-1-thioredoxin was expressed in the midgut and showed thioredoxin activity. This is the first report on the heterologous expression of the shrimp penae

Bruins-Maple Leafs Preview Jan. 5, 2014 TORONTO (AP) -- The Boston Bruins are counting on Rask to keep the same steady goal support he's had throughout his career. That will be a tall order, but the Bruins hope Rask can do better than he did on an easy night for him on Thursday night. Rask will be in the starting lineup for the second consecutive game, and the defense that has been one of the bright spots for the Bruins (18-6-5) through the first two-thirds of the season will need to continue to provide the big shots that keep the team afloat. Boston's defense plays mostly in front of Rask, and Brad Marchand and Patrice Bergeron will be the first line centermen. The Bruins do benefit from more power play time and get many power plays after winning consecutive games. The scoring has dried up lately, but they'll need the rest of the team to help them on the road. "They're a great team. There's no doubt about that. But we feel like we can play with them," Marchand said. "We feel like we've been close before and we'll be ready to play again." Boston is coming off a 1-0 win against the Toronto Maple Leafs on Jan. 2. Tuukka Rask made 33 saves, and the Bruins had 12 power plays compared with the Leafs' one. They now have gone 2-0-2 in their last four road games and 7-1-2 in their last 10 games overall. "I think (Rask) has been a great goaltender in the past. I think he's one of the best goaltenders in the league and I think it's a great situation for him, but we're obviously not happy with our play," Boston coach Claude Julien said. "It looks like some goalie trade is going to happen next week, so we'll see. "I think we'll have our best team coming back and it will be a pretty even game. I think the other teams recognize that so they're not going to go in there with a lot of scoring chances. I don't think that's their game." The Leafs played one of their best games of the season against the Bruins, outshooting Boston 40-22. Boston, however, held a 31-12 edge in shots in the third period and won the game. "We played
