Roblox is an online game platform and game creation system developed by Roblox Corporation that allows users to program games and play games created by other users. Created by David Baszucki and Erik Cassel in 2004 and released in 2006, the platform hosts user-created games of multiple genres coded in the programming language Lua. For most of Roblox's history, it was relatively small, both as a platform and a company. Roblox began to grow rapidly in the second half of the 2010s, and this growth has been accelerated by the COVID-19 pandemic. Roblox is free to play, with in-game purchases available through a virtual currency called Robux. As of August 2020, Roblox had over 164 million monthly active users, including more than half of all American children under 16. Although Roblox has received generally positive reviews from critics, it has faced criticism for its moderation, microtransactions, and exploitative practices directed toward children. Roblox is the most popular video game platform in the United States, Canada, the United Kingdom, Germany, France, Russia, South Korea, Japan, India, Brazil, and Mexico, according to Sensor Tower.[2] In 2016, Forbes named Roblox the fastest-growing private company in the U.S., with revenues of US$133.7 million. By August 2019, Roblox had more than 160 million monthly active users, 45 percent of whom were under the age of 12, and a user base of 164 million. By December 2019, that number had increased to 184 million monthly users.[3] As of October 2019, the total number of registered users is over 230 million, with active monthly users at more than 180 million. The company's name is a portmanteau of "robot" and "ludus". Roblox makes use of a proprietary programming language called Lua, which has been used in a variety of games including Minecraft and Super Mario Maker. The system supports the creation of virtual worlds, which are called Roblox domains (or ro

Feel free to use our tool, and enjoy the free goodies! Leagues helped Counter-Strike: Global Offensive develop into the global phenomenon it is today. Leagues also brought very unique features to CS:GO, including gold, crowns and crates. GOLD The first feature of the game was that it introduced real-world currency. Unlike in the previous Counter-Strike version, where you had to buy the $20 Game Time CD, players could now buy a specific number of gold, with 1 or 5 buying a CD, and a $20 game time. This proved to be a big selling point, as it allowed players to add more cash into the game, making it more enjoyable. It also added more incentive to people to play, as you can easily upgrade yourself by buying crates, or buy better weapons/ammo. CRATES The second big feature was crates. The concept was simple – you could buy a set number of crates for real-world money, or play an achievement, which would give you points to buy any amount of items. This idea was a great one, as it linked in-game achievements to real-world accomplishments. It also set a new bar for game achievements. The feature was not all good, though, as it did not give players a large choice of what to buy. All items were available, so it was not possible to choose specific items. What's more, buying a specific item required you to have the same amount of real-world money as the item itself. This meant that if you had bought 10 crates and used 5 to buy an M24 Sniper Rifle, you would not have any money left to buy more items. CROWN 804945ef61
