[] Nano-engineering of surface plasmon mediated fluorescent 3D-tetrahedron gold nanocrystal for metal ion sensing. Two-dimensional (2D) and three-dimensional (3D) gold nanostructures with high surface-to-volume ratio have attracted considerable research interest. Here we report a colloidal solution-based approach to fabricate 3D fluorescent gold nanocrystals with high photoluminescence quantum yield. Gold nanocrystals were obtained by tuning the molar ratio of trisodium citrate to cetyltrimethyl ammonium bromide. Our results indicate that the formation of gold nanocrystals is influenced by the molar ratio of trisodium citrate to cetyltrimethyl ammonium bromide and by the size of the gold nanoparticles. As-synthesized gold nanocrystals show a broad absorption band with a peak position at 556 nm and two distinct emission peaks centered at 655 and 723 nm. The fluorescence properties of the as-synthesized gold nanocrystals can be tuned by changing the size of the gold nanocrystals and the molar ratio of trisodium citrate to cetyltrimethyl ammonium bromide. Our results demonstrate that the citrate-mediated synthesis method is effective in fabricating 3D tetrahedral gold nanostructures with fluorescence.

Newsroom SAGINAW, MI — Jack Lindblad, who started Lindblad Moving and Storage in 1960, is celebrating 50 years in the commercial moving business on the West Coast.
