You can use ncftp. Here's a detailed tutorial on how to do it step by step. If you're new to FTP, here's a quick tutorial as well. For this tutorial, I'll be using a Linux server with FTP accessible via your local network. If you're not the best at using terminal, here's a quick tutorial on how to use it. We'll be removing the Linux system's mysql.cnf file, which is stored in the /etc directory. To do that, log in to the Linux system as root. Change directory (cd) to the /etc folder. Then, run the ncftp command to enter the folder. If you have problems with your terminal, you can check out the tip below. Press ctrl + x, then y to confirm your action. You should be taken to the /etc 2edc1e01e8
